Dear Dr. Andrew Tix,

First off, I'd like to thank you for reading my letter. My name is Jasmine [REDACTED] and I'm currently working on a research project where I can research any topic of my choice, and with the topic I chose, I thought I could use your help with answering my question. And this question is kind of personal, because I always here this question. In fact, I've asked it a few times myself and I still can't get to the bottom of it. I just need to know the answer to this question.

The question that I need to know the answer to is what the meaning of life is. If you can tell me the truth about life's meaning, I'll feel like I fully understand it. With a B.S. Degree in Psychology, I was hoping a master at the mind could help me find an answer. I've done some research and have found out that all sorts of people have different answers. From Religion to love to sports. But I want to know the real answer. I want to know the truth. My prediction on my research topic will hopefully give me the answer I'm looking for. So, I thought I'd start finding a solution by asking a professional. I really am passionate about this topic really I am. I've been trying to answer it for the past two years and I always get so frustrated about not knowing the real answer. So, I would like you to come to my school and speak to the class in late April/early May. Or we could do a Skype talk with the class if you can't come.

Thank you for your time. I want to let you know of how many great things you've done. But I do have one question. What made you want to do psychology in the first place? And would you like to Skype or come in person for the first two weeks of May?

Sincerely,

Jasmine [REDACTED]
